

Herongate Barn Theatre: The Cemetery Club: June 25th, 2015

“THE CEMETARY CLUB” by Ivan Menchell
AT THE HERONGATE BARN DINNER THEATRE

For those TEGSA members who enjoy a theatre outing without the stress of driving downtown with the added hassle of finding a spot to park, Herongate Barn Dinner Theatre in Pickering, offers a viable option – with it’s close proximity to those who live in the East End. This dinner theatre offers good comedy coupled with a reasonably good dinner, not to mention the camaraderie of 40 enthusiastic TEGSA members who attended the play on Thursday, June 25th.

THE CEMETERY CLUB is billed as “touching, boisterous and wickedly funny”. The cast of five certainly did their best to live up to the billing – providing the audience with a poignant insight into the lives of three widowed friends, each of whom strives to maintain a comic relationship with their deceased partner. “Some relationships are so strong, nothing could possibly break them... not even death. “The Cemetery Club” is a story about love and friendship and how they endure conflict and loss through time. Though the play focuses on the dark subject of death, the story dialogue and talented acting make this production lively and enjoyable with boisterous one liners and wickedly funny situations!”

TEGSA members are welcome to suggest any theatre outings they would like to attend. Markham Theatre offers a variety of shows and we will make some effort to find suitable shows in the fall. An outing can only be as successful as the people who are interested in participating - - so - come out and enjoy the offerings.
